

Films: Twilight

The Twilight series of books by Stephanie Meyer is quickly emerging as a phenomenon among teens. The first installment hit the big screen in November 2008—and this movie is available on DVD.

Now, the Twilight saga continues with the second movie in the series being released on November 20, 2009.

The author:

Stephanie Meyer, an Arizona mother of three, woke up June 3, 2003 with a vampire dream fresh in her mind.

The dream was so vivid, that she decided to write it down so she wouldn't lose any of it. As the weeks past, she continued to flesh out her dream story, and within three months it had grown into a full-length young adult novel.

A mere three months after finishing her first draft, she signed a book deal with Little, Brown and Company, and The Twilight Saga began.

Managed by her little brother Seth, Meyer's official website includes both an official short bio, and a longer unofficial one written in first person: "I filled the 'Jan Brady' spot in my family – the second of three girls." But the best reason to visit it, is to read the rough draft of "Midnight Sun," the fifth (and still unpublished) book in The Twilight Saga.

After it was distributed illegally on the Internet, Meyer decided to post the 264-page partial draft on her own site, along with her thoughts about how upsetting the theft of her book was, and her musings about whether or not she will ever be able to finish the book.

Twilight Lexicon is a collection of character bios, places, timelines, and vampire and werewolf mythology compiled by webmasters Alphie and Pelirroja.

Much of the material comes from the books themselves, but there is also an archive of email Q&A between the site owners and Meyer, in which the author shares additional details about her characters. "Edward's full name is Edward Anthony Masen Cullen.

His mother's name is Elizabeth and his father's name is also Edward.

His human life in Chicago was fairly happy and uneventful."

The books include: "Twilight", "New Moon" ,"Eclipse", "Breaking Dawn" and "Midnight Sun,"
